[Review] Wikki Stix: Happy Kids, Happy Mommy

My eldest daughter, Ainin Akhtar is 3 years and 8 months. She is very aggressive and loves experimenting. For her, anything can turn out to be her toys. Her dad golf ball, our office calculator, even a cloth hanger also do. It is the nature of a toddler. For instance, she will put her rubber ducks inside her mouth to taste it. At first, I really freaks out because she might take other stuff as well to know how it 'taste'. That is why we delayed to introduce playdough to her because she might end up chewing and swallow it.

Until one fine day, I received an email from Think Thank (the exclusive distributor in South East Asia) and introduced me the Wikki Stix (Wikki Stix made from hand knitting yarn and food grade safe wax are used to coat it). I then received some sample and definitely want to tries it out with the kids. I am totally overwhelmed because at the first glance, it really looks like a candy stick!

I found out that Wikki Stix only made available in South East Asia quite recently and with the opportunity to have the sample, no one can resist to give it a try. At first when I shows it to Akhtar, she said it is a candy and want to eat it right away (don't worry mommy! Wikki Stix is food colouring safe and gluten free too). But parents still need to supervise their kids while playing with it because kids might choke on the yarn if they attempt to swallow it.

In the sample packet, it comes with few colourful sticks. Although it is bit sticky, but kids just love it. I just took out plain drawing block, wrote some alphabet on it and asked Akhtar to follow the line using Wikki Stix. At first, she does not get the idea of twisted the stix. But after few samples that I made, she immediately took the whole stick from my hand and started to twist it to form A, B and so on. Even Afzan (the little sister) could not resist and lend some hand.

I also drawn some flowers, a circle shape and a house. Both of them really enjoy playing with the stick. Beside it safe, the size of the stick and the nature of it that need to be twisted can indirectly improves their fine motor skill.

They do it all and they enjoy it. Will definitely buy more stix because they just love it (of course to avoid them biting and pushing one another for it).

If mommy out there want to buy these great stuff for your kids, do visit this place.
